SOME THEORIES ON SLEEP

One is That Slumber That Robs One of Years of Life is Simply a Bad Habit.

When lower forms of animal life are experimented with in the laboratory the tendency is to diminished activity or complete rest (sleep) in the dark and to increased activity in the light. This chemical effect upon protoplasm in general becomes rhythmic with the alternating day and night, and in the hundred million years that led to the evolution of man the original terrestrial protoplasmic rhythm became an established function of animal life. With the development of a nervous system this regular periodicity of action and inaction was doubtless taken over to a considerable extent by the neurons, as has occurred with other functions of protoplasm. If this be true, may we not look upon sleep, that robs us of 23 years of activity in our short lives of three score and ten, as a bad habit, as an incident or rather accident of our existence on this particular planet? One wonders for instance as to the relations of sleep and activity on a planet like Jupiter, with a ten-hour day, five hours of light and five hours of night, with six years of polar night, and seasons each three years long. What about sleep on Saturn, with its luminous rings and eight moons, and also five hours of day and five hours of night? How about sleep on planets lit by duplex or triplex suns, or in the solar system of Theta Orionis with seven suns?—Frederick Peterson, in Atlantic.

PESSIMISTIC PARENT

De Friend—What is your son Hiram doing in the city?

De Farmer—I dunno yet. His letters are mighty cheerful and confident. I'm jes' waitin' to find whether he's buyin' gold bricks or sellin' 'em.

SISTERS DIED TOGETHER.

A tragic discovery was made in a small flat in the northwest part of Berlin one day recently, when the police forced an entrance and found the tenants, two aged sisters, Antonie and Minna Spanger, dead. They were the daughters of a high state official, who died nearly fifty years ago, and for twenty-five years they had lived in a flat in Potsdamerstrasse until the rent became too much for them.

They moved twenty years ago into the rooms which were the scene of the tragedy. The little household was maintained by the elder sister, an artist, but with advancing years her earning capacity diminished and parish relief had to be sought. Then illness attacked the elder sister, and it is believed she died and that the younger sister committed suicide by hanging.

The old ladies had for the past forty years lived as hermits, and did not receive a single visitor. Even the next door neighbors would not have known them by sight.

RETICENT ABOUT DETAILS.

"The average woman," declaimed the corner club speaker, "lays down the kitchen rolling pin to take up the orator's gavel. Does not every man here confirm me in this statement of wives' disdain of the humbler instrument?"

"My wife uses her rolling pin all right," said a meek little man in the rear, "but I'd hate to have to tell you her batting average."

A MEAN SLAM.

"You keep trying to sell your poetry, I see."

"Do you disapprove of that?"

"No; but why not secure the agency for a good egg beater or vacuum cleaner? Your persistency would win great success if you were peddling a really meritorious article."

SCRIP EVERYWHERE; MONEY COULDN'T BE HAD

were unable to go to their banks and get the money they had earned and had deposited there.

During that period of time I myself recall that a check on the Treasury of the United States, drawn by the sergeant-at-arms of this House, payable to myself for one month's salary, was refused payment by one of the greatest banks in the middle West. The banks locked up the money of the people in their vaults during that typical Republican panic, and they issued their own paper, in violation of law.

We suspended the operation of the criminal and civil laws of this country and permitted throughout the land every bank that wanted to do so to violate the law. On this side of the House there was not a murmur of discontent or disapproval throughout the dark days of 1907—not a single political speech calling attention to this panic, for which the Republican Party was directly responsible, was made on this side of the Chamber. It was a case where we applied the faith cure to the situation, and starting on the Democratic side of the House and of the Senate we made speeches of confidence, and the inspiration created here spread throughout the country.

"Out in my section a widow who had saved up two or three hundred dollars and hid it away, because she did not believe in banks, was so inspired with the patriotic feeling which started on this side of the House and extended throughout the country that she brought her money from its hiding place and deposited it in a local bank, and said: 'Here is my money; I feel I ought to contribute this toward the security of the banks and business throughout the land.' Those acts of patriotism, numerous as they were, conspicuous as they were in 1907, can all be traced to the wave of patriotism which was inspired by Democratic leaders here and throughout the country in the dark days of this Republican panic. Patriotic utterances so frequent in 1907 and 1908 on this side of the House are absolutely lacking at the present time on the other side of the House.

HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A household remedy of the French peasantry, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Mayr, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold here by
